The MTV Movie and TV Awards aired live Sunday night

"Stranger Things" won Show of the Year and "Beauty and the Beast" took home the award for Movie of the Year

(CNN) — The rebooted MTV Movie and TV Awards, which now honors both big and small projects, debuted on Sunday night.

The show was hosted by comedian and actor Adam DeVine, who kicked things off with an over-the-top musical number from "Beauty and the Beast."

Actress Emma Watson, who starred in the Disney blockbuster, won the night's award for best actor.

"I think I'm being given this award because of who Belle is and what she represents. The villagers in our fairytale wanted to make Belle believe the world was smaller than the way that she saw it, with fewer opportunities for her. I love playing someone who didn't listen to any of that," Watson said in her acceptance speech.

The actress also pointed out that was the first year MTV had genderless categories, which made the honor even more meaningful to her.

"Moonlight" co-stars Ashton Sanders and Jharrel Jerome won the award for best on-screen kiss.

"This award is bigger than Jharrel and I. This represents more than a kiss, it represents those who feel like the others, the misfits, this represents us," Sanders said when he took to the stage.

Given the show's opening number, perhaps it was not suprising "Beauty and the Beast" won movie of the year. The Netflix newcomer "Stranger Things" took home the golden popcorn for show of the year.
