The American Music Awards (AMAS) is an annual American Music Award show, typically held in Fall, created exclusively by Dick Clark for ABC in 1973 when the network ended the Grammy Awards by ABC. The contract was terminated. Let us that the award statue is produced by the New York Firm Society awards. This year the show features a star-studded lineup team of artists from genres and eras that viewers will enjoy watching. At the award show last year, Taylor Swift received the Art of the Decade award. He is currently the most respected artist in AMAS history and has the opportunity to break his own record.
